Food Safety Committee
(Rules and Regulations)

Implementation of The Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006 at Rajiv Gandhi College of Engineering and Technology (RGCET), Puducherry:

Understanding the Act: The first step in implementation is to thoroughly understand the provisions of The Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006 (FSS Act). This involves studying the definitions, regulations, and requirements outlined in the Act, especially those related to food safety, standards, and licensing.

Establishment of Food Safety Committee: RGCET establishes a Food Safety Committee comprising faculty members, administrative staff, and food safety experts. This committee oversees the implementation of food safety measures and ensures compliance with the FSS Act.

Vendor Selection and Monitoring: RGCET ensures that all vendors operating within the college premises, especially those in the canteen, adhere to the guidelines set forth in the FSS Act. Vendors must possess a valid Food Safety License issued by the appropriate regulatory authority.

Vendor Training: RGCET conducts regular training sessions for canteen vendors on food safety practices, hygiene standards, proper handling and storage of food, and compliance with the FSS Act. This training aims to enhance the vendors' understanding of their responsibilities and ensure the safety of food served on campus.

Procurement and Quality Control: RGCET ensures that all food items procured for use in the canteen meet the quality and safety standards specified in the FSS Act. This includes sourcing ingredients from reputable suppliers, inspecting food items upon delivery, and maintaining proper storage conditions to prevent contamination.

Hygiene and Sanitation: RGCET maintains strict hygiene and sanitation standards in the canteen premises. This includes regular cleaning and disinfection of cooking equipment, utensils, and food preparation areas, as well as proper waste disposal practices to prevent cross-contamination.

Regular Inspections and Audits: RGCET conducts regular inspections and audits of the canteen facility to ensure compliance with the FSS Act and identify any potential food safety hazards. These inspections may be carried out by internal food safety officers or external regulatory authorities as required.

Record Keeping and Documentation: RGCET maintains comprehensive records and documentation related to food safety practices, vendor licenses, procurement processes, inspections, and audits. This documentation serves as evidence of compliance with the FSS Act and helps in tracking and addressing any issues that may arise.
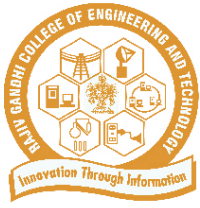

Continuous Improvement: RGCET is committed to continuous improvement in its food safety practices. This involves staying updated on any amendments to the FSS Act, adopting best practices in food safety management, and implementing feedback from stakeholders to enhance the effectiveness of food safety measures on campus. By implementing these measures, RGCET ensures that all food provided in its canteen is in compliance with The Food Safety and Standards Act, 2006, thereby safeguarding the health and well-being of its students, faculty, and staff.
